When Tradition is Given a Trademark. Artisanship Within the Museum Folk-Fairs in the 2000s Romania
When Tradition is Given a Trademark: Artisanship Within the Museum Folk-Fairs in the 2000s Romania

Author(s): Marin Constantin

Subject(s): Customs / Folklore, Micro-Economics, Rural and urban sociology, Socio-Economic Research

Published by: Centre for Advanced Study Sofia (CAS)

Summary/Abstract: My text is an attempt to characterize artisanship in Romania following a field research conducted in 2005 within five folk fairs set up by the Museum of Peasants and the Village Museum (Bucharest), the Museum of Villages in Banat (Timisoara), the Astra Museum (Sibiu), and the Museum Complex of Suceava and Bucovine (Suceava).
When you visit any of the Smithsonian's 19 museums and galleries or the National zoo, you are entering the largest museum complex in the world. This complex holds about 137 million unique objects in its trust for the American people. The Smithsonian was established in 1846 with funds given to the United States by James Smithson, an English scientist. The main idea was to increase and spread knowledge for free. Every tree in the rainforest is covered in a species of another kind. The black wasp uses the tarantula as a nest for its eggs, plants need monkeys for seed dispersal, and the clouds are necessary for the survival of the whole rainforest. This is because they provide moisture.